To the Walt Disney Archives,

I'm researching the life of Jim Bissell, a family friend from my parents' generation (he stood in my parents' 1947 wedding party), for a personal writing project documenting his life.

According to a MousePlanet historical feature, "Up, Up and Away With Walt Disney," by Disney historian Jim Korkis, Jim Bissell served as a co-pilot for Walt Disney's personal Gulfstream aircraft during the 1970s and 1980s, flying alongside chief pilots Chuck Malone and Jim Stevenson, and alternating trips with pilot Kelvin Bailey. The aircraft was based at what is now Bob Hope Airport in Burbank, California.

I'm hoping the Archives might have additional information on Mr. Bissell's time with the company, such as:

- Employment or personnel records confirming dates of service
- Flight logs, trip records, or manifests noting his name
- Photographs of him with the aircraft, crew, or Disney personnel
- Any other documentation of the corporate aviation program during this period

I'd be grateful for any records, leads, or guidance the Archives could offer, or a referral to another resource if this falls outside your collection. Thank you for your time and for preserving this history.

Sincerely,
Jim U'Ren
